

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A diagnostic support apparatus includes a diagnostic support content storage section which stores a plurality of diagnostic support contents for providing diagnostic support, a selecting section which selects desired diagnostic support content from the plurality of diagnostic support contents stored in the diagnostic support content storage section, an information acquiring section which acquires diagnostic information concerning at least one of a patient, an examination, and an image from a medical system, a diagnostic support information creating section which creates diagnostic support information on the basis of the diagnostic support content selected by the selecting section and the diagnostic information acquired from the medical system, and a diagnostic support information display section which displays the created diagnostic support information. With this arrangement, diagnostic support can be selectively used in accordance with diagnosis purposes and contents, and latest diagnostic support contents can be used.